Canada-Ontario Great Lakes shore damage survey: coastal zone atlas. Ottawa, 1976. n.p. 637 maps, aerial photographs, organization chart. 42cm. Loose leaf with ring binder.

The fundamental aim of the Coastal Zone Atlas is to provide easily read base maps, compiled from the latest available survey information and as accurately represented as the scale will allow. There has been a 50% reduction of scale between the master copy and the final printing size. Each of the 637 map sheets in the Atlas is large enough to accommodate approximately 9 kilometers or 6 miles of shoreline at a scale of 1:20,000 (one centimetre to 2000 metres, or one inch to 1,666 feet) when drawn on a 1,000 metre grid superimposed on a 6° Universal Transverse Mercator Projection. The Atlas is divided into four parts according to the general direction of gradient flow of the Great Lakes System: Lake Huron, St. Clair River/Lake St. Clair/Detroit River, Lake Erie, Lake Ontario. Each part is preceded by a page illustrating the general bathymetry of the corresponding lake and a key index map for that lake.
